

Project Gutenberg Analysis

Shinjini Ghosh

July 11, 2020

Analysis

1. Title of the novel analysed: The Mysterious Affair at Styles by Agatha Christie
2. Total number of words: 56410
3. Total number of unique words: 9925
4. Top 20 most frequent words:

No.	Word	Count	No.	Word	Count
1	the	2624	11	in	821
2	i	1654	12	he	718
3	to	1336	13	is	538
4	of	1261	14	not	511
5	a	1201	15	had	501
6	and	1124	16	she	482
7	it	955	17	her	462
8	that	938	18	his	416
9	was	926	19	at	394
10	you	848	20	but	394

Table 1: Top 20 most frequent words

5. Top 20 most frequent interesting words: Here, we have excluded the top 1000 English words from consideration.

No.	Word	Count	No.	Word	Count
1	poiro	357	11	howard	83
2	inglethorp	244	12	asked	80
3	mrs	231	13	inglethorp's	72
4	mr	179	14	mary	69
5	john	161	15	dorcas	69
6	cavendish	137	16	looked	66
7	sir	106	17	strychnine	65
8	cynthia	98	18	alfred	64
9	into	95	19	dr	61
10	lawrence	84	20	evidence	56

Table 2: Top 20 most frequent interesting words

6. Top 20 least frequent words, chosen randomly out of all those used just once:
subsided, world-wide, attended, sensational, persist, invalidated, front, depressing, month's, sick, relations, senior, forty-five, yarn, inviting, again-after, seventy, autocratic, social, fondness
7. Interesting word usage pattern: Poirot comes into the book, not right at the beginning, but around the fifth chapter, and then has a lot of action before going a bit out of sight again towards the end. The number of usages of "Poirot" in each chapter of the book are [0, 1, 5, 1, 41, 79, 13, 49, 52, 17, 43, 18, 14].
8. Look up a quote: The quote "A man in love is a sorry spectacle." was found in Chapter 12.
9. Randomly generated sentence: We used a unigram model, randomly choosing a next word out of all the eligible words, to create a sentence starting with "The" and 20-word long. A few interesting sentences that came out are:
 - The jury is that?" "No." "Is it on the criminal or two, and wife." "Ah!" said John. "What does not
 - The old friend Japp was frowning perplexedly, and finally settled down the poisoned last moment—which partly your possession. No notice
 - The gardeners' evidence, but you must hurry to catch sight of the net he is correct, madame. But he goes,
 - The examination of the daily papers, all this is a moment's satisfaction of Hercule Poirot, and in which I dropped
 - The Scotland Yard fellows?" "Gone to substitute some important document—possibly a book?" "Yes, yes," I wonder?" "Some one to my